Women Decorators Will Help Red

"For some time I have been suffering neurswithenia, acute melancholia and a desire to avoid people and a lack of interest in anything and everything. Insomnia; just weary. Haven't even been near the club in three weeks. Hiding away in cheap picture shows or staying in the house. Even baseball is no attraction for me. Everybody is against men. So one more mistake and then—the Great Conundrum."

The some time I have been suffering neurs in the 'charred remnants of furnishings and objects of art, a spick and span Red Cross booth almost fills the window of the building at 5 East Forty-eighth street showing that in spite of a fire which destroyed most of the materials gathered together by the New York women interior decorators for their sale to aid the Red Cross such last minute hard luck will not prevent the the Great Conundrum."

A week ago he entered on a page of minute hard luck will not prevent the his digry the word "Exit," indicating collection of Red Cross funds. that he had planned death that day.
